
Media Release

Chiefs of Staff, News Directors

Wednesday 10 February 2016

Conservation planning essential as nature moves with climate change

A range of international climate assessments have confirmed that global biodiversity is changing in response to shifts in regional climate – and environmental managers must carefully evaluate oTepinal climatem every major group studied has been affected - trees, herbs, butterflies, birds, mammals, amphibians, corals, invertebrates, fish, marine mammals & plankton; and n