

The study recommends ongoing research to establish the threshold temperatures and the length of exposure